FOREWORD

With the completion of this volume, the family now has 13 generations and 400 years of its collective heritage recorded and documented. The three volumes, which comprise this study, total 1,854 pages. Approximately 10,000 individuals are listed in the indexes, of which 4,561 are direct descendants of the first known English "Hosmer". As far as the author is aware, this is the most comprehensive study ever compiled on the descendants of the emigrant Thomas Hosmer.

Volume III covers a period roughly spanning the years 1880 to 1950. Readers of Volume II will note a certain amount of overlapping in the years covered. This is unavoidable since generations, like people, do not always fall into neat categories. The time frame of this study is especially fortuitous, in a genealogical sense, for it coincides with two distinct but equally revolutionary developments -- photography and governmental documentation.

Beginning in the early 1840's, photography started to record man's visual history to a degree never approached by paintings or drawings. Once the domain of the privileged elite, portaits now became available to the general masses. Unlike art, however, which relied solely on the ability and expertise of the painter, photography depended on the quality of the equipment and the skill of the operator. This remarkable advancement blended the skill of the technician with the sensitivity of the artist. The creation of the photographer was a life-like reproduction that told more about the subject than about its maker. From 1860 onward, photography became available to almost every American family. Both urban and rural families had equal access to professionally trained photographers. These early professionals were technically proficient, but their artistic approach was formal and rather stilted. Artifical backdrops and formal attire were the standards of the day. Nevertheless, their beautifully produced photographs were the first accurately made reflections that our ancestors had of themselves. That, alone, was a revolution. The fact that we have today so many of these photographic treasures, illustrates, in a rather concrete way, how highly our forebearers valued these visual representations.

Equally important, but perhaps less dramatic, was the revolution in government record keeping. Aside from decennial censuses, land records, and military files, the federal government, prior to 1850, was not particularly interested in vital record information. For the most part, this was the responsibility of the family and the church. Starting in 1850, however, things began to change. The census for that year listed, for the first time, the names and ages of virtually every free white person in the United States. Subsequent censuses would delve even deeper into the personal lives of our ancestors, touching on such topics as health, parents (places of birth), language, financial status, and living arrangements. On the state and local level, especially after 1880, agencies routinely issued and recorded birth, marriage, and death certificates. These administrative innovations would alter, forever, the relationship between the government and the citizens it served. These records, so painstakingly compiled, would also prove to be invaluable to future generations. Academics and family historians alike have profited greatly from the diligence and foresight of these early record keepers.

As a genealogist, I have tried to incorporate into this book as many of these photographic and administrative records as possible. Not only do these legacies of the past provide us with an interesting window into the late 19th and early 20th centuries, they also give us a solid base from which to launch additional research. It is hoped that these records will offer additional weight to the information provided.

All systematic knowledge is built on the work and research of others. Genealogy, as a serious academic endeavor, is no exception. One of the earliest genealogies on the Hosmer family was written and compiled by James B. Hosmer in 1861. This small, but highly informative, pamphlet has been the starting point for many Hosmer researchers. Recognizing its importance to the family, I have included a facsimile reprint of this classic work in the appendix.

Although thousands of sources have been used in compiling this study, there are still many things that we shall never know. It is a regrettable but an undeniable fact that documents are lost and memories fade. The task of the family historian is to preserve, as much as is humanly possible, the records that remain and to put this information into some convenient and logical form. For the past 25 years, I have sought to achieve this objective. How successful I have been in this attempt, I leave to the reader and to future generations to judge.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Sharing information enriches all who contribute. This simple truism is, perhaps, especially applicable to the field of genealogy -- a study built upon the knowledge of others. Through the generations and through the centuries, members of our family have kept meticulous written records and have passed on our family's rich oral heritage. Like threads of an ornate tapestry, the contributions of our forebears have blended into an unique and colorfully distinctive family portrait.

To the 108 persons listed in Volumes I and II, I would like to add the names of the following individuals. Their special knowledge has enriched us all. It is hoped that future generations will follow their example and continue to record and preserve our family's presence in this country.

The stately mansion, pictured above, was built sometime during the Civil War. The person or persons responsible for its construction are unknown, as is the original owner of record. Shortly after the war, Gustavus Pomeroy Hosmer purchased the building and "finished" the structure, according to his own needs and comforts. The brick home remained in the family for many years until Gustavus Hosmer's wife, Mary E. Hosmer, sold it to Fred J. Smith, a Lockport wholesale grocer. Mr. Smith, in turn, sold the building in 1923 to Lockport Lodge, 73, F&AM. For the next 23 years, the building served as the city's Masonic clubhouse. The Niagara Municipal Corporation purchased the house and property in 1946.

HOME OF GUSTAVUS P. HOSMER

Harriet A. Hosmer [Gustavus P. Hosmer's daughter] has provided us with a remarkable first-hand account of this stately Lockport mansion. The following excerpt came from her typed memoirs entitled: Memories, Vol. I.

Note: The original spelling, spacing and punctuation has been preserved.

When I was six years old, my father exchanged our home on High Street, paying the diference for a fine large two and half story brick house with mastic or brown stone fonish, then called a mansion, at 140. East Avenue,
It had fourteen rooms, twelve foot sealings, tall, broad windows from the floor, with folding inside shutters,
The living rooms om first floor opened with broad door ways into central front hall so all could be thrown together for entertaining company.
At right of front door was the cozy reception room in Persion colors I called my parlor and usually received my friends there.
Back of it was the large dining room, side entrance, large kitchen and other rooms,
On the left of the front hall were the double parlors each fifteen by twenty feet, and we used the back parlor for our general stiitng room.
The front parlor Father had decorated and furnished in French style like one he saw in Paris.
The walls were frescoed in nile green and pink pannels outlined with gold leaf, and each end of the sealing a pretty little landscape, all done by Buffalo German artists.
In the center was a beautiful christal chandelier, and between the two tall side windows a fire place and pure white sculpture carved mantle surmounted by large square beveled French plate mirror, and another tall mirror to match, filling the space between the two large front windows, hung with Irish lace curtains and heavy silk damask lamberquins.
The velvet madalian carpet of many bright colors, was woven in Scotland to fit the fifteen by twenty foot room. furnished in Empress Eugenie rosewood, with carved heads and inlade with gold leaf, and tufted and upholstered in heavy crimson brocade satin.

The only pictures in the room were e steel engraving of one of the madonas on an easel in one corner, and on opposite wall a very fine Spanish oil painting of the holy family, called The Pearl, Father bought while in Madrid costing one thousand dollars.
Porcelin vaces of shell pink with gold handles and fine womens heads, and a perian marble statuett on [?] light green silk drapery adorned the mantel,
And another marble statuett of Cupid wattering flowers. on the tall mirror marble shelf. also fine bronze Statue of Venus.
The house wes in center of nearly an acre of beautiful grounds, with velvet lawn, driveway, hedges, shrubery, and fine spreading maple trees,
Also crochet ground, and arbor of thirty varieties of crapes, seperating the pretty garden fron small orchard of apple, pear, plumb and cherrie trees.
And at back of lot were the barns stables for horses, cow, chickens, doves, rabits, ginnie-pigs, cats and dogs, for we childred loved and had many pets.
There was every thing necessary for comfort and pleasure of a large family.

[3] .... -- Mary (Bates) Dade made some additional remarks concerning Albert and Sarah's place of marriage. Mrs. Dade wrote:

> I got the impression that Albert Hosmer and Sarah Mosier [sic] Palmer were married in N. Y. C. from more of mother's [Jennie Mary (Balcom) Bate's] writing:
> Sarah was a popular young married woman in N. Y. C. when her husband Albert was commissioned by the government to go to Buffalo and build the breakwater that still protects the harbor there. He [Albert Hosmer] was a college man - graduate, I think - Mother had his college books - an engineer, now called Civil. I have seen clippings from N. Y. C. newspapers calling Sarah 'the belle of the city' and bemoaning her removal to 'the wild and primitive Buffalo!'

GEORGE LEONARD HOSMER
(1874 - 1934)

PROF HOSMER DEAD; TEACHER 37 YEARS

Retired Member of Faculty of M. I. T. Wrote Several Textbooks—Was Widely Consulted.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—Professor George Leonard Hosmer, a member of the Civil Engineering Department at Massachusetts Institute of Technology for thirty-seven years until his retirement last October, died at his home in Woburn today after a long illness. He had been a professor of geodetics, the study of surveying and navigation, since 1923.

As a director of Camp Technology, the institute's Summer camp for civil engineering students near Machias, Me., since its establishment in 1911, he contributed much to its development into one of the noteworthy educational projects of its kind.

In 1901 he was a member of a scientific expedition to Sumatra, where he made astronomical and magnetic observations during a total eclipse of the sun.

He took part in many engineering projects in this country, including work in sanitation, water supply and power development, boundary surveys and grade crossing elimination, and at one time was a member of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.

He was the author of a number of text books on geodesy, practical astronomy and navigation and in collaboration with Professor Charles B. Breed prepared a two-volume work on surveying. He was also interested in genealogy and compiled the records of the Hosmer family in this country and in England back to 1500.

A scientist by training, George Leonard Hosmer approached the study of genealogy with an academic integrity of a seasoned professional investigator. He not only studied the data, he also studied the sources. An examination of his classic work, Hosmer Genealogy: Descendants of James Hosmer ... (1928), illustrates, quite clearly, how carefully he assembled and presented his material. For the most part, he relied on documentary evidence, but when this was lacking, he actively sought out family sources. He recognized, of course, that family records (family Bibles, papers, stories etc.) were not always accurate. Time and handwriting were serious obstacles. To compensate for these inherent shortcomings, Professor Hosmer contacted literally hundreds of relatives throughout the country.* He evaluated the material they sent him and weighed it against his own vast resources of family information. Utilizing this method, Professor Hosmer successfully reassembled the family tree. Without his dedicated efforts, much of what we know today, on the descendants of James Hosmer †, would have been lost.

STEPHEN TITUS HOSMER
(1763 - 1834)

If the rule of law is truly the mortar which binds civilized society, then those who advocate its application are its masons. Stephen Titus Hosmer was one of these builders, for he devoted a lifetime to the pursuit of justice.[1] First, as a Connecticut state legislator and then as a Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court[2], he helped to formulate, codify, and standardize the laws which governed his native state. A possessor of a keen and probing intellect, Justice Hosmer remained aloof, preferring to judge the merits of a case not on the emotions of the moment, but on the principles of fairness and judicial correctness. Single minded in his discovery of the truth, he would not rest until he had all the facts before him. In Justice Hosmer's court, there were no insignificant details. Anything which aided in the unfolding of the truth was important. A systematic presentation of evidence was essential. If all in the judicial system did their assigned tasks properly, the conclusion was inevitable -- Justice![3]

Stephen Titus Hosmer was born on January 10, 1763[4], the eldest of seven children.[5] His father, Titus Hosmer, was a prominent Middletown lawyer[6] and a signer of the Articles of Confederation.[7] Young Stephen grew up in an enriched environment. Surrounded by books and interesting people[8], Stephen, at a very early age, absorbed the ethics and values of the period. Social responsibility, hard work, faultless integrity, and personal modesty were all qualities valued by his parents, his church, and his community. It is little wonder then that Stephen sought to emulate the models before him. Blessed by heredity and tempered by the revolutionary times in which he lived, Stephen embarked on a life devoted to public service.[9]

Stephen began his education in the common schools of Middletown. We know that he was an exceptional student by the fact that he entered Yale College in 1778, at the age of 15. His father was a graduate of Yale College[10] and this, perhaps more than anything else influenced Stephen's choice of colleges.[11] At the time, Yale ranked among the top two or three colleges in the nation. Because of its outstanding academic reputation, it drew to its doors the sons of some of America's most prominent and gifted families.[12] Stephen's college years were, perhaps, among the most carefree years of his life. Not yet saddled with the responsibilities of earning a living, he was free to examine and evaluate the world around him. It gave him an opportunity to exchange ideas and to develop his reasoning skills. The friendships he forged during this incredibly exciting period would last a lifetime.[13] Among his select circle of friends were men who would eventually rise to state and national prominence. Included in this group were such men as: Chief Justice Zephaniah Swift, Senator Uriah Tracy, lexicographer Noah Webster, Governor Oliver Wolcott, Governor John Cotton Smith, and Chief Justice David Daggett. When not studying, these young men would gather among themselves to discuss and to debate the great issues of the day. Stephen, along with his friend Simeon Baldwin, belonged to the literary society known as, "Unity". Behind closed doors, they presented papers and defended positions. Such mental excercises would serve them well in their future professional endeavors. Only two years into his college career, Stephen would face the first of many personal tragedies. On August 4, 1780, his father died suddenly at the age of 44.[14] The impact of this devastating blow can only be imagined. Titus Hosmer was not only a loving father, he was also a mentor and an example to be followed. From him, Stephen developed a love for the law and a passion to serve society. Perhaps, because of his father's great respect for education, Stephen decided to redouble his efforts at college. The disciplined structure of the academic community fitted well with Stephen's own well ordered personality, and it helped him cope with the grievous loss of his father.[15] After several brief interruptions, caused by the Revolutionary War, Stephen graduated from Yale in 1782. His thirst for education was to be a lifelong journey. Eight years after graduation, he earned a master's degree, and in 1823, towards the end of his life, Yale conferred upon him a doctor of laws degree.[16]

Following graduation in 1782, Stephen came under the protective wing of his guardian, Oliver Ellsworth.[17] Mr. Ellsworth knew of his ward's great desire to become a lawyer, and, to aid him in that quest, he sent him to Stratford, Connecticut. There, Stephen studied law under the careful guidance and direction of the noted legal scholar, William Samuel Johnson. The training he received in Stratford was not only rigorous but also comprehensive. During the course of his studies, Stephen developed a phenomenal memory that would serve him well throughout his entire professional life. It is said that he could recall, at will, precedents needed for almost any legal situation he encountered. After two years of study, his legal training came to an end, and he returned to his native Middletown. Now, surrounded by familiar settings, Stephen began his legal practice in earnest. At about the same time, Stephen entered into another lifelong commitment -- marriage.[18] On January 4, 1785, Stephen married Lucia Parsons[19], daughter of Major General Samuel Holden Parsons.[20] Thus, in the space of only a few short months, Stephen launched both his professional and his married life.

As with most new business ventures, Stephen's law practice began quite modestly. From the beginning, it was apparent that he would have to prove himself in the community before others would feel comfortable with him handling their affairs.[21] In a rather unusual turn of events, Stephen became one of his own first clients. His mother was named administratrix of his father's estate. Before she could proceed in her duties, a number of legal obstacles were placed in her path. Stephen, acting on her behalf (and, indirectly on his own), maneuvered adroitly through the various legal entanglements. The case proved to be incredibly involved. It was 14 years before the family was able to arrange the first accounting of the estate.[22] Stephen's share of his father's property was, to say the least, disappointing. For all his efforts, he received only a few minor pieces of real estate and his father's law library.[23] In another matter, Stephen represented himself in the settlement of his father-in-law's estate. In this case, Stephen was named administrator. As the result of his personal legal dealings and the work he performed for others, Stephen's professional reputation grew. Fees paid to the clerk's office indicate that he had, by far, the largest legal practice in Middletown and the surrounding areas. His professional credentials were so impressive, in fact, that he was chosen, along with Samuel Woodruff, to form a committee to evaluate Noah Webster's application for admission to the Bar.[24]

By the middle of the 1790's, Stephen found himself at the zenith of his professional career. As an attorney, he had achieved a great deal in a relatively short period of time. Now, he sought other areas for personal growth and self fulfillment. He had always had a strong desire to enter public service, but family and financial responsibilities had always prevented him from making a commitment in that direction. His improved circumstances, however, both monetarily and otherwise, removed whatever inhibitions he might have had, in this regard, and opened the way for a major career change in his life.[25] His first foray into politics came in 1794 when he ran as a Federalist for the office of Assistant [a member of Connecticut's upper house]. He was only 31 years old at the time. In those years, as today, the power of incumbency was extemely strong. Although he lost, his showing was impressive.[26] In 1797, his fortunes changed, and he was elected to the lower house of the state legislature. Middletown reelected him to this position in 1800. Five years later, in 1805, Stephen entered into a new and challenging phase of his life. In that momentous year, he was elected Assistant. In that same year, he was also appointed State's Attorney for Middletown. In those two capacities, he served the state admirably for the next 10 years.[27]

During Stephen's first two years as an Assistant, the upper house performed both legislative and judicial functions. The Court of Assistants was essentially the state's appellate court of last resort. The decisions of this body were final and were published anonymously. Despite the cloak of secrecy, it was not difficult to identify the opinions penned by Stephen Titus Hosmer. His language was direct and his logic irrefutable. Perhaps because of his legal training, he approached each case with a high degree of professional detachment. Once all the facts were presented, Stephen began the long and methodical process of review and analysis. His written opinions were frequently long because he took pains to answer each argument presented by counsel. His decisions were also marked by a heavy reliance on legal citation. The clearly unconstitutional blending of legislative and judicial powers in the upper house was remedied in 1807 when the Superior Court was established as a separate entity.[28] Stephen Titus Hosmer served four years as a judge on this court.[29]

On a personal level, Stephen was a kind and affable man, devoid of the usual excesses associated with political life. Home and family were paramount. In many ways, he was a man driven by habit. His days were devoted primarily to work and study. Only an hour of mild exercise interrupted his daily labors. Personal amusements were saved for the evening. He loved music and often practiced the violin.[30] How proficient he was on this instrument, history is mute, but, if he applied himself with his usual degree of application and study, he must have been a performer of some note.[31] It is reported that he also possessed a fine singing voice[32] which he shared with family and friends. His skill in this area is reflected by the fact that he was the leader of his church's choir.[33] Of all his recreational diversions, reading was, certainly, the most satisfying. He particularly enjoyed books on history and theology.[34] His personal library was well rounded and uncommonly large by the standards of the day. At his death, this noteworthy collection contained approximately 400 law book, over 100 religious books, and another 100 volumes spanning a wide variety of subjects.[35]

The Congregational Church, of which Stephen Titus Hosmer was a faithful member[36], had come of age in the 18th century. It was no longer the dominant and stifling force that it had once been.[37] Despite its numerous relaxations, it was still a largely conservative institution. Its dignified and formalized rituals were comforting to a community beset by the struggles of ideas and values. It was, in a very real sense, a moral anchor in a sea of change and uncertainty.[38] New religions, particularly those which aroused the emotions and passions of its adherents, gave special concern to the traditionalists. These new religious organizations seemed to run counter to the staid and conservative models of New England's past. Perhaps, it was the emphasis on emotion rather than reason that prompted Stephen to make the following critical observations on the Methodist movement:

> The first teacher delivers a most enthusiastic harangue, - breathing hard by reason of excess of spiritual gas, - clapping his hands together, hallooing, shouting - shaking sinners (that is, all who are not Methodists) over hell, and declaring to the Saints (the Methodists only) that they shall soon be, hail fellows well met, in heaven. - If there is any appearance of dislike, the Sinner is told to look on the preacher, and observe well his face, for that he shall soon bear witness against him at the Bar of Heaven. - After the spirit is evaporated a second starts up, and when he is extinguished, a third and a fourth. By this time the curtain rises. An impure atmosphere, fatigue, terror etc. all conspire, and down tumbles a fainting sinner. The Saints huddle around her, praying, clapping their hands, etc. After which she rises, gives glory to God for the great change wrought in her, and calls upon poor sinners to play the same game. During the whole service the room is filled with exclamations. One cries 'Amen', another 'Glory to God' etc., etc.[39]

Stephen Titus Hosmer was not an intolerant person by nature. Indeed, he was by training and inclination, a man who carefully weighed all points of view. His religious toleration can be seen in an excerpt from one of his opinions.

> I deeply regret that in this age of religious freedom, it should ever have occurred to any one, that an expression of belief, however erroneous, on a disputed point of doctrine, in the respectable churches of this State, was an attempt to subvert religion; and what is more extraordinary, that a court of law should be called on to prescribe bounds to theological discussion.[40]

He sought the truth wherever it appeared. He realized that men of conviction could honestly disagree on points of principle. It was only when men abandoned the bounds of reason and logic that Judge Hosmer felt compelled to voice his disapproval.[41] Fanaticism, in any form, was an abomination. Such deviant behavior was to be ridiculed and condemned, for it closed the mind, and, in his view, emptied the soul. At one point, Stephen even attempted to equate the Methodist movement with a type of social sabotage. After observing several of their nocturnal gatherings, Stephen wrote:

> The fruits of the spirit appear [at the close of their meetings]. In the day time not one (I believe) has been converted; very few in the evenings; but at witching time of night the deed is done.

He further reported that he found the men at these meetings:

> ... as wild a gang of fellows as, perhaps, ever assembled. On the whole, the mad enthusiasm of the Methodists will, probably, produce as its ultimatum the extremest profligacy and confusion, to the disgrace of real religion and in subversion of the public peace.[42]

These were strong words, but they indicate how serious Stephen Hosmer viewed this strange new religious movement. As a judge, he recognized that these citizens had a right to practice their religion as they saw fit. As a man, and as a member of an established religion, however, he could not mask his own revulsion at their bizarre behavior. Before we condemn his highly charged and slightly intemperate remarks, we must remember that he wrote of the Methodist movement as it was then (or as he perceived it) and not as we know the Methodist Church today. In an age of reason, emotional upheavals seemed strangely out of place and contrary to the new atmosphere of individual choice based on knowledge. Perhaps, more than anything else, it was the abdication of free will which troubled this devoted advocate of self-discipline and self-control.

Like his father before him, Stephen Titus Hosmer was not only a man of words, he was also a man of deeds.[43] When ominous signs began to appear during the War of 1812, Stephen felt compelled to offer his services to his country. Although he was 51 years old at the time, he volunteered to serve in the state militia. Even though he held many positions of trust in state government during his adult life, he did not let past accomplishments influence his military service. He accepted the rank of corporal with his customary good grace. Fortunately, the war ended before Stephen was called to active duty.[44] It was during these troubled months that Stephen was named a Fellow of Yale College. He succeeded his old friend, David Daggett.[45]

The capstone of Stephen Titus Hosmer's professional career came in 1819 when he was elected by the General Assembly to the post of Chief Justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court.[46] His selection was not entirely without opposition. Some of his Federalist colleagues charged that he had compromised his principles in order to obtain this position. Those who knew him, of course, realized how patently absurd these accusations were. Integrity was the essence of Judge Hosmer's character. Personal advancement at the expense of principle was something totally alien to his nature. Fortunately, the controversy died down quickly and Chief Justice Hosmer began his duties as the presiding officer of the state's highest tribunal.[47] Judge Hosmer's new duties proved to be both time consuming and physically taxing. Twice a year, for example, he was required to visit each of the state's eight counties. On these occasions, he served as a circuit trial judge. Travel in those years, even under the best of circumstances, was physically draining.[48] For a man in his 50's, these regular visitations must have been doubly burdensome.[49] His appellate duties came into play twice a year when he and his four fellow justices met to form the Supreme Court. Here, they heard appeals from the lower courts. For the first six years of his tenure, Chief Justice Hosmer, following the example of his predecessor Chief Justice Zephaniah Swift, wrote almost all the decisions handed down by the court.[50] Such an exhausting schedule, of course, could not be maintained indefinitely. Justice Hosmer realized, reluctantly, that, for the sake of his own health and for the smooth operation of the court itself, he would have to share his decision writing obligations with the others on the court. Even with their help, Justice Hosmer managed to pen an average of 13 opinions a year, approximately one third of all the decisions rendered. His capacity for work was truly assounding. During Judge Hosmer's 18 years on the bench [4 years as a judge on the Superior Court and 14 years as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court], Stephen Titus Hosmer heard a total of 707 cases. Of this number, Justice Hosmer authored an incredible 389 opinions![51]

For all his public utterances and official duties, Stephen was still an intensely personal man who preferred the comforts of home and family to the fleeting fortunes of fame and power. He and his wife Lucia dedicated their lives to the protection and education of their children.[52] Although he himself was blessed with extraordinary health[53], his family suffered through a multitude of diseases and accidents, many of which ended in death. Of his 11 children, only 6 would survive him.[54] Through it all, Lucia was at his side, sharing his grief and giving him comfort. Not only a companion, she was also a reservoir of strength and perseverance.[55] On February 28, 1825, Stephen's tower of strength succumbed herself.[56] Her passing would be the final grievous blow in a life beset by personal tragedy. It was a loss from which he would never fully recover.[57] The depth of his loneliness can be seen in a series of letters that he wrote to his friend Isaac Webb, on the works of Sir Walter Scott. Amist his literary criticisms, Stephen's own sense of emptiness can be detected.

> My heart has been more lacerated by the sad catastrophe of the Countess Amy, than by the deep and human wounds inflicted, by all the lovely widows in the State. I was born to feel acutely.

> One look expressive of a kind heart and temper well attuned surpasses in worth the finest features, with the complexion of the rose.[58]

There is no doubt that Stephen found a kindred spirit in Sir Walter Scott. The works of this noted author were therapeutic, allowing him to express his own grief and sense of loss.[59] He wrote: "Pray help my infirmity by a cordial from the same bottle [referring to the works of Sir Walter Scott]. If it was brandy, I should not be a drinker of cold water".[60]

Stephen's appreciation of the fair sex was not confined to literary criticism and comment alone. He was also a poet in his own right. The short verse, which follows, was written when he gazed upon the loveliness of a certain witness in his court:

> Oh, those black eyes, they pierce my heart,
> That smile, beguiles each sense;
> That glance, propels the fatal dust,
> And is it all pretence?
> Ah no; you love and fain would lose,
> A mangled, glowing heart;
> Take it, my fair, and then I'm sure,
> You'll draw the barbed dart.[61]

It is unclear whether Stephen looked forward to retirement or dreaded it appearance. Whatever the case, it is clear that he had no control over the matter.[62] The state constitution required that all Supreme Court justices to step down upon their 70th year.[63] After 18 years on the bench, no one more richly deserved the rewards and leisure of retirement than Justice Hosmer. Still mentally active, Stephen entered his new situation with customary good grace and healthy mental attidude.[64] The newspaper, Connecticut Courant noted Stephen Titus Hosmer's retirement with the following announcement:

> Chief Justice Hosmer, having reached the age which by the Constitution terminates his official course, has determined to resume his professional engagements at the Bar, and also proposes to open a school for the instruction of young men in the science of Law.[65]

Sadly, Justice Hosmer never accomplished the goals he set out for himself.[66] Retirement proved to be an anticlimax to an otherwise exciting and productive life. His numerous personal losses, combined with the inevitable physical declines of age, took their toll on this venerable old gentleman.[67] On August 6, 1834, after a brief illness, Chief Justice Stephen Titus Hosmer died, at the age of 71.[68] His passing marked an end to an era in the judicial history of Connecticut. No one before or since has been his judicial equal.[69] Sixty four years after his death, his accomplishments were still being remembered by a grateful state. The following comments came from an unnamed Hartford paper:

> He was a lover of books, a lover of music, and the leader of the choir in the church where he worshipped. His attainments in theology, history and general literature were noteworthy. His personal appearance was commanding, his manners affable, his elocution polished and graceful. His industry, urbanity, impartiality, dignity and patience, united to sound judgment and extensive legal acquirements, made him almost a perfect judge; and he adorned his religious profession by the life and conversation of a Christian.[70]

Like his father before him, Stephen Titus Hosmer knew the obligations that came with ability and intellect. It was service, and this he gave freely.[71]

GEORGE SYLVESTER HOSMER
(1861 - 1909)

George Hosmer was neither rich nor particularly gifted, in the worldly sense, but he was a respected and valued member of his own community. Steeped in the work ethic of the 19th century, George Hosmer, like his father and grandfather before him, possessed all the virtues of the classic American farmer. God fearing, honest, dependable, and self-sufficient, he provided for his family, he supported his church, and he cheerfully extended his hand to those in need. Like all men, of course, George Hosmer was not without his own limitations and personal shortcomings. One of these failings, unfortunately, would prove to be his final undoing. Although his death was self-inflicted, it was, nevertheless, a shattering blow to his family and a grievous loss to his friends and neighbors. He was a very special person. Hopefully, the biographical summary which follows will illustrate this point. Drawn primarily from personal recollections and family records, this study offers an insight into his character and a brief glance into the period in which he lived.[1]

George Sylvester Hosmer was the fourth child and second son of Stephen and Angeline (Ash) Hosmer.[2] There is some question as to the year of his birth, but official records place it at 1861. He was born in New York State[3], probably in or around the Wilson area.[4] His middle name was given in honor of his paternal grandfather, Sylvester Hosmer, who was one of the early settlers of Niagara County.[5]

As a lad of 18, George, eager for adventure, struck out with his older brother, Will, for the logging camps of Michigan.[6] In those early years, Michigan was noted for its great timber wealth.[7] Many young men from Western New York, tired of the monotony of farming, went into that wilderness and tried their hand at the axe.[8] It was not an easy life, but it appealed to the young, for it offered a degree of freedom and an opportunity to test one's mettle. How long George remained in Michigan is unknown, but it was probably no more than one or two years.

The camaraderie that George experienced during his logging camp days, no doubt, influenced him later when it came time to look for another job.[9] He returned to Niagara County, New York in the early 1880's, and promptly found work as a bartender at the Tower Hotel in Wilson. At the time, bartending was considered an "improper" occupation for a respectable young man. Indeed, to many people, dispensing liquor was but a few steps away from wanton abandon and eternal damnation. Such were the views during this conservative period in rural Niagara County.[10]

One family source speculated that George met his future wife, Florence Barker, at one of the many country dances held in the area.[11] She was 14 and he was 22. Her tender years, as well as, the age difference, and George's "questionable" occupation made Florence's parents extremely apprehensive about their daughter's future. Knowing her parents' views on the matter, Florence decided to keep her feelings for George secret. This probably prompted George and Florence to elope rather than wait for her father's approval. Their decision to elope would trigger a series of events.[12] Regarding the marriage itself, Eva Hosmer recalled the important points, as they were related to her by her mother, Florence:

> ... [She] was only 16 when she ran away to get married to George Hosmer who was eight years older than her. He got the ring from his mother [Angeline] because he didn't have a marriage ring [of his own]. They were married the 28[th] [of] September [1886] [in] Youngstown, Niagara County.[13]

Following their marriage, the newly-weds spent the night at the home of George's uncle and aunt, William and Lizzie Hosmer. The next morning, Florence's father, Martin Barker, armed with a horse whip and accompanied by his wife, stormed the Hosmer residence. Once at the door, he demanded to know the whereabouts of his daughter, "Florence Barker". Lizzie Hosmer, who answered the door, told Mr. Barker that there was no one in the house by that name although there was a Florence Hosmer. The news of their daughter's marriage was, understandably, a shock to Florence's parents, but it was also a relief to know that their daughter was safe and sound. With this out of the way, Lizzie invited them in to see the new Mrs. Hosmer -- provided that Mr. Barker would leave his whip at the door! Notwithstanding this shaky and rather uncomfortable beginning, Martin Barker would prove himself to be an understanding and generous father-in-law.[14]

The movements of George and Florence, immediately following their wedding, have not as yet been determined[15], but it is known that their first child, Eva Frances, was born in Youngstown, Niagara County, New York on Aug. 23, 1887.[16] About two years later, the family moved to North Ridge where George's father, Stephen Hosmer, owned a large farm. There, they lived for the next two or three years. The farm was a pleasant place with a meandering creek through the middle of it, a stand of woods, and a small, but adequate, log cabin. Eva's recollections of this early period in her life were, naturally, a bit hazy, but she was able to recall that the family moved to another farm also on the Daniels Road. Their stay at this second farm was brief, perhaps only a stopover on the journey to North Tonawanda.[17] Of course, it is impossible to know precisely why George decided to move his family from the country to the city, but job opportunities, as well as, the easier life style of the city were certainly factors.

North Tonawanda, even by the standards of 1892, was not a particularly large city. For a country family, fresh off the farm, however, North Tonawanda must certainly have appeared as a thriving and bustling metropolis.[18] After he and his family had settled in, George found work with Mr. Edward Pickard, who owned a furniture store and funeral parlor on Main Street. Hired as a carpenter, George spent most of his working hours making furniture and, presumably, coffins. From time to time, he was also called upon to drive the parlor hearse.[19] George was fortunate in that he lived not far from where he worked. According to his daughter, the family lived on the third floor of a "fallerblock", located on the corner of Main Street and Webster.[20] They had the front apartment facing the street. Eva's uncle and aunt, William and Nellie (Barker) Thornton, lived on the same floor, in the rear apartment. The family physician, Dr. Leonard, lived, conveniently, only one floor below them. George continued to work for Mr. Pickard for about six months[21], and then, for reasons unknown, he moved the family back to Wilson.[22]

George had a great affection for the slow-paced life of the farm. Friends, familiar surroundings, and the proximity of nature were but a few of the intangibles that George found so agreeable. Florence, for her part, never really shared her husband's enthusiasm for country living. Being young and full of life, she yearned for the excitement and convenience of the city.[23] In 1893 or 1894, George, presumedly, in response to his wife's wishes, decided to move the family to Tonawanda. Through the assistance of one of Florence's relatives, George succeeded in finding a comfortable house on Manhattan Street. Here, the young family lived a normal and fairly contented life until the tragic events of one fateful night.[24] According to George's daughter Eva, the family had been invited to a party, given in honor of one of George's relatives.[25] The party was only a few doors away, so the family walked to the event. It was a festive affair, interrupted suddenly when young Eva frantically told her father that she could see flames billowing from their house. George rushed to their home in hopes of salvaging some of their possessions. He especially wanted to retrieve his mother's picture. His efforts, however, were thwarted by a fireman who physically prevented him from entering. The house was completely engulfed in flames and, sadly, nothing could be saved. Although the exact cause of the fire was never officially determined, the fireman at the scene speculated that the house had been robbed and then set afire.

The days and weeks immediately following the disastrous fire were, understandably, difficult for everyone concerned. Everything was lost. George was forced to move his small family back to the country.[26] George's father-in-law, Martin Barker, had a farm on North Ridge in Cambria. As a temporary measure, Mr. Barker loaned George about an acre of land in which to build a house.[27] Later, when his circumstances had improved, George purchased 10 or 12 acres adjacent to his father-in-law's farm.[28] On this site, George built his home and established an orchard and farm. He would spend the next 15 years of his life contently watching over his small agricultural enterprise.[29]

The family's new home on Daniels Road was both comfortable and spacious. Like most farm houses on "The Ridge" and surrounding areas, it was 2 stories high, had high ceilings, and was of frame construction. Eva recalled fondly its arrangement. There were three large bedrooms upstairs plus a walk-in "clothespress" [closet]. Downstairs, there were 4 rooms -- a sitting room [living room], a parlor, a dining room, and a walk-in pantry. Later, George would add to the downstairs, a screened-in summer kitchen. This outdoor addition spared his wife much of the heat and humidity that went with preparing the huge midday meals of summer.[30]

Although small in size, George's farm produced an incredibly wide variety of produce and animal products. For his own consumption, George had chickens and pigs. He also owned two cows which supplied all his family's dairy needs.[31] A few head of sheep[32] and two working horses completed his animal stock. Cash crops consisted primarily of tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, squash, watermelons, potatoes, strawberries, and "mushmelons". His cherry and plum orchards were also extremely productive and accounted for a large portion of his cash income. As an insurance policy against the uncertainties of winter, George often grew several specific crops that stored well in the cool darkness of the cellar. Chief among these hardy long lasting items were: pumpkins, potatoes, apples, carrots, squash, and cabbages.[33]

As one can see, from the inventory above, the family was largely self-sufficient in food. With the exception of flour, coffee, and sugar, the farm provided practically everything the family needed to survive.[34]

As previously mentioned, the family's living arrangements were always a constant source of friction between George and Florence. Simply put, George loved the country, and Florence adored the city. In an effort to resolve their differences on this matter, an informal compromise was struck. It was agreed that the family would divide its time equally between the city and the farm. After the fall harvest, the family would move to the city, and George would seek work. The Hosmers would remain in the city throughout the winter. With the coming of spring, the family would, once again, return to the farm where George would begin spring planting. This country/city arrangement would continue, with only a few exceptions, for many years.[35]

During the spring, George often worked for Mr. Luffe who owned a greenhouse. For his labor, George received a minimal salary of 50¢ a day. This meager remuneration was supplemented by a barter agreement whereby George could take all the vegetable plants he needed for his own use.[36] It was an equitable arrangement for both parties, and one which gave George a distinct advantage over his competing neighbors. Professionally grown, greenhouse plants were stronger and produced more abundant crops than those grown in the conventional manner.[37]

Most farmers in Cambria took their produce to either Lockport or Niagara Falls, but George chose to sell his produce at the Farmers' Market in North Tonawanda.[38] Price was probably not the determining factor in his decision. It was more likely due to the fact that several of his relatives lived in that city.[39] Going to market was a day long affair. George would get up at 2:00 o'clock in the morning. After a quick breakfast, he would hitch up the horses[40] to the "democrat"[41] and would start off on the 16 mile drive. The "democrat" had been loaded the previous evening so there was little that had to be done before he left. Guided by a lantern, George made his way through the country lanes. On the way, he had to go over Pekin Hill. This hill was so steep that George had to put stones behind the wheels, halfway up, to rest the horses.[42] Once over this obstacle, the rest of the journey proceeded uneventfully. About 5:30 or 6:00, he would arrive in the city where he would unload his vegetables and fruits and prepare for the Market's opening at 7:00. George would stay at the Market until about 11:00, by which time, most, if not all, of his produce had been sold. If Eva was with him, the two of them would visit relatives for a short time and then begin their long journey home. Barring break downs or other delays, George would usually return to "The Ridge" by late afternoon - tired but with silver in his pockets.[43]

When it came to matters of hygiene and orderliness, George and Florence were fastidious. Every spring, George would take time off from his normal activities to dig another hole for the privy. A few of his neighbors considered this annual exercise unnecessary, but George recognized the health benefits associated with such a practice. Always cognizant of the possibilities of contamination, George made sure his new site was far enough away from the family well. He also made sure that his privy always had an abundance of lye on hand.[44] In an era when typhoid fever and diphtheria were real concerns, George's precautions were certainly prudent.[45] Animal waste presented another serious problem. George, in an effort to keep the flies in check and the smells to a minimum, cleaned out his stalls and pens regularly. Liberal distributions of straw, not only kept the dust down but it also absorbed much of the liquid waste.[46] The elimination of all odors was, of course, an impossible task on the farm, but George's efforts went a long way in making farm life more bearable.[47]

In her domain, Florence was equally diligent. Twice during the year -- once in the spring and again in the fall -- Florence and her daughters completely cleaned the house. Most household items were removed, and then the walls and floors were completely scrubbed. Carpets were beaten and blankets shook out and let to air. Nothing escaped her attention.[48] Such meticulous care was it own reward that paid benefits in both health and comfort.

The lot of a farmer's wife was not an easy one. Household chores and child rearing duties consumed much of her time. Florence was no exception.[49] In addition to her usual chores, she found time to make butter, currant jelly, and pickled cucumbers. She also canned a number of fruits and vegetables including strawberries, raspberries, and melons. One of her specialities was "salted down" eggs which she put up in 5 gallon crocks. Florence would often trade her surplus canned goods for those of her friends.[50] By sharing the bounty, everyone in the community benefited.

It is one of the ironies of life that childhood memories are often more vivid than recollections of the recent past. This is particularly true with regard to the elderly. Insignificant events of 60 or more years can be recalled with amazing clarity and detail.[51] Eva, for example, remembered one such incident which occurred when she was a very small girl. On a cold winter day, her parents decided to visit her Aunt Nellie who lived in Lockport. Although Lockport was only ten miles away from North Ridge, it was a trip that required some preparation, especially in winter. Her father not only had to hitch up the horse to the buggy, he also had to heat the bricks. To modern ears, this latter practice sounds a bit odd, but, in the 1890's, it was a common occurrence. Bricks heated in the oven and then wrapped with towels or blankets often served as heaters of the time. Placed on the floor board of the buggy, these portable sources of heat radiated sufficient warmth to keep the family's feet comfortable and dry for the entire two hour drive. The family, of course, was appropriately dressed to face the rigors of winter. They wore coats, hats, hoods, gloves, scarves, shawls, and fur lined muffs. As a final protection against the cold, George placed a heavy blanket across their laps. Thus braced against the elements, the young family began their journey in relative comfort. Once in Lockport, George would unwrap the bricks and take them inside. They would be heated again for the return trip home.[52]

For the first eight years of her life, Eva was an only child. Being the only youngster in either the Hosmer or Barker families, she enjoyed a very special position, a world of her own. By her own admission, she was a bit spoiled, but she reveled in the love and attention that was lavished on her.[53] Her carefree life changed radically in 1895 when tragedy once again struck the family. In May of that year, her mother gave birth to a baby boy. The proud parents named their new son, Alton. He was a beautiful baby, but it was clear, almost from the very beginning, that something was terribly wrong. The infant cried incessantly and the doctor seemed powerless to ease the child's distress. Little Alton, apparently, suffered from a milk intolerance. He was unable to properly digest the milk that was given to him. As a consequence, he lost weight, and, after only five brief months of life[54], he succumbed in November.[55] It was a crushing blow to the young family. Although the Hosmers never completely recovered from this loss, they realized that life had to continue.[56] Three years later, a third child would enter their lives. Born on May 16, 1898, Mildred Irene entered the world, a healthy and robust infant.[57] Unlike her brother, she suffered none of her sibling's medical complications. Now, with two healthy girls to raise, the Hosmers, once again, returned to the affairs of living.[58]

It is not an unfair assessment to say that George Hosmer was the classic indulgent father. He adored his children and lavished both gifts and attention on them. He loved to play with them and often joined with their friends in games and roughhouse. He saw to it that his daughters always had the best of clothes and that they lacked nothing of the necessities of life.[59] Even in trying economic times, he could be extravagant. When Eva was only 10 or 12 years old, George bought her a surrey with the fringe on top. It was a beautiful rig and Eva proudly drove it to school everyday.[60] When she was in her teens, George got her a very expensive red bicycle[61] -- a novelty in rural Niagara County.[62] During the summers, he often made it possible for Eva to visit relatives in Toronto.[63] It is little wonder then that Eva had such fond memories of her father. In many ways, George was a boy himself. He never completely outgrew his youthful exuberance. His enthusiasm for life was infectious and this trait he passed on to his children.

One can often tell a great deal about a person by simply examining a photograph. Whether the portrait was taken 100 years ago, or only yesterday, the individual's features and expressions speak louder than words. These subtle indicators are like mirrors to the soul, they expose the inter-person. Such is the case with the oval photograph on page 14. From George Hosmer's likeness, we sense almost instinctively his carefree nature and his quick wit. The twinkling of his eye and the slight twisting of his mustache reveal a man who enjoyed a good story and a person who looked, by nature, towards the lighter side of life. He was, in short, a man totally devoid of pretension.[64] Equally at ease with children as he was with adults, George made friends easily. According to his daughter, he was the most popular person on "The Ridge".[65] Physically, George was of slender build and slightly below average in height, perhaps only 5' 4" or 5' 5". Of his personal habits, we know little except that he liked to drink, occasionally to excess[66], and that he chewed tobacco.[67] Politically, he was a Democrat.[68]

Entertainment in the years before the turn of the century was often of the homemade variety. Hay rides, quilting bees, picnics, church socials[69], spelling bees, and barn dances were but a few of the many activities which broke up the daily routine of farm life.[70] Even such tame diversions as browsing through the "wish catalogue" or looking through the family stereoscope provided our 19th century ancestors with hours of serene amusement.[71] Of course, if one were to rate the various social activities of the day, visiting friends and relatives certainly would rank high. These family outings almost always came after church on Sunday and usually lasted well into the afternoon. After a huge midday "dinner" the children would go outdoors to play and the adults would gather in the parlor to chat and drink coffee. During a lull in the conversation, the men would often excuse themselves and slowly gravitate to the cellar where they would talk politics, smoke, drink hard cider, swap stories and tell jokes. The women, for their part, would either remain in the parlor or go to the kitchen where they would show off their handiwork, discuss church affairs, sample cookies, or exchange recipes. In addition to these normal diversions in country life, there were also special seasonal events which everyone in the community looked forwarded to, such as the annual Fourth of July picnic, the Christmas play, The Farmers' Picnic at Olcott Beach, and the harvest dance. Family reunions, in the summer, were also important events since they brought together relatives, young and old, who would not otherwise see each other because of distance.[72] As one can see, country entertainment in the 1880's and 1890's revolved around both the family and the community.[73]

To the south of George's home, there was a field which grew wheat in the summer. During the winter, a portion of this field iced over and the local children used to skate there. George, who also skated, would build fires near the ice so that he and the neighbor children would have a place to warm themselves.[74] Needless to say, his concern and thoughtfullness were not lost among the area's youth.

As difficult as it is to realize today, there was a time when the saying, "sound as a dollar" really did mean something.[75] On more than one occasion, Eva fondly recalled how her father bought a farm, clothed his family of four, and put food on the table -- all for a dollar a day! Of course, much of the food they ate, they grew themselves; and, much of the clothes they wore, they fashioned themselves.[76] Still, it was no mean accomplishment. It was as much a testimony to the thrift of Eva's parents as it was an affirmation to the integrity of the U. S. dollar.[77] To give the reader some appreciation for the value of the dollar around the turn of the century, the following price list is given. The prices were from Bert Lafler's General Store, as recalled by George's daughter, Eva:

Sugar	5¢/lb.
Eggs	12¢/dozen
Milk	5¢/quart
Bread	5¢/loaf
Coffee ["Arbunkle" brand]	15¢/lb.

To better serve his customers, Bert Lafler also had a "traveling store", a wagon which went from farm to farm. Stocked with household items, hardware goods, and trinkets of various kinds, this store on wheels met the simple needs of farm people who could not always go to town themselves.[78]

George's death was both tragic and mysterious.[79] Only 48 years old at the time, George, for reasons still unexplained, consumed a lethal dose of methyl alcohol.[80] According to one family source, George was painting the wheels of his buggy at the time of his death. Perhaps, it was the fumes from the paint combined with the proximity of the wood alcohol that affected his judgment.[81] A chronic alcoholic, George may have been already intoxicated when he took that fatal drink.[82] Unfortunately, we shall never know, for certain, what events led up to his untimely passing.[83] His death was officially ruled an accidental poisoning.[84] It is interesting to note that his death came only one day before his daughter Eva's 22nd birthday and one month before Eva's marriage.

The suddenness of George's passing came as a shock to relatives and friends alike.[85] In the entire county, there was not another man who was more well liked than George Hosmer.[86] The following obituary notice appeared in the local papers:

> George S. Hosmer died at his home [this] afternoon, aged 48 years. Of his immediate family, he leaves, to mourn his passing, his wife, and two daughters, Eva and Mildred, residing at home, three brothers and one sister residing in Tonawanda, N.Y. The funeral services will be held from his late home Tuesday at 2 o'clock and from the Brick Church at 2:30. Interment in North Ridge Cemetery. Buffalo and Tonawanda paper[s] requested to copy.[87]

According to his daughter Eva, the funeral was among the largest ever conducted on "The Ridge". So many people attended the church service that men had to stand outside. Everyone, apparently wanted to pay their respects to this exceptional man.[88]

George's death was not only an emotional crisis for the family, it was also a financial calamity, as well.[89] Unable to run the farm herself, and faced with an increasing number of financial obligations, Florence was forced to sell both the farm and its animals.[90] Even "Nel", the family horse, had to be sold.[91] After the disposition of the farm, Florence and her youngest daughter moved to Buffalo.[92] There, she found work as a clerk at a delicatessen. The job paid only $8.00 a week. Out of these meager wages, Florence had to pay $18.00 a month for rent.[93] That left very little for food and clothing. Despite the hardships, she was able to make ends meet and to rebuild her life.

Florence's financial situation improved little during the next three or four years. Then, about 1913, after years of legal maneuvering, she came into a long anticipated inheritance.[94] It all began in Nov. 1906 when Florence's uncle, William E. Barker died.[95] He had been a very successful furniture manufacturer in Detroit, and, through years of hard work, had accumulated a considerable fortune.[96] By the provisions of his will, the bulk of the estate was to go to his widow, Annie. The remainder, after expenses, was to be divided into 9 equal parts -- 1 share going to each of his 2 surviving brothers and their 7 children. It was further stipulated that upon Annie's death, her share of the remaining real estate was to be divided into 9 equal shares -- again, 1 share going to each of William's 2 surviving brothers and their 7 children. In the event that any of the nine should die before the full implementation of the will, their share would be divided proportionally among the other heirs.[97] What should have been a fairly straightforward probate matter, soon degenerated into an ugly legal entanglement.[98] Mrs. Annie Barker died on Dec. 26, 1912.[99] Shortly thereafter, for reasons still not completely understood, Haylett B. Barker [William's brother] decided to contest the original will. His lawyers initiated a number of legal challenges. To settle the matter, Haylett proposed that each of his nieces should receive $10,000. Lillian (Barker) Sherman, Florence's sister, thought this proposed division was unfair, and she convinced her sisters to fight it in the courts. Lillian's lawyer, Ed Lee, went to Detroit to press his clients' interests. His efforts were totally ineffective, and the final outcome was a financial disaster. Instead of $10,000 apiece, each sister received only $4,000. Travel expenses and legal fees (from both sides) consumed much of the sisters' share.[100] Although Florence's inheritance was much less than she had originally hoped, it was still enough to allow her to purchase a 2 flat house on Royal Avenue in Buffalo.[101] This investment freed her of rent and provided her with a small, but steady, income. With her future relatively secure, Florence and her daughter began to enjoy some of the little pleasures of life.[102]

POSTSCRIPT:

If the foregoing narrative appears to the reader to be unnecessarily long and slightly rambling, it is because the subject has special meaning to the author. George Hosmer was my grandmother's father. Because he meant so much to her, I thought it only fitting that I should devote a few pages to his memory. In a very real sense, my grandmother was my living link to the past. Through her eyes, I was able to see and experience a time and a place, very different from my own.

Roberts], this ring is currently in the possession of the author. The ring appears to be 18 karat in composition and was made probably prior to 1853. It is wide but thin (from wear) and the outside surface carries a repeated pattern. The simple design and inconsistent craftsmanship indicates that the ring was, almost certainly, of local manufacture. (The Author).

[16]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, July 5, 1973. According to Eva, no record of her birth exists as a fire destroyed the Youngstown city records. (Ibid.). -- A duplicate birth certificate was issued in 1943. This document confirmed her date of birth but gave her place of birth as the, "Town of Wilson". (Birth Certificate [Duplicate] - Eva Frances Hosmer. Date of Birth: 23 Aug. 1887. Place of Birth: Town of Wilson, Niagara County, New York State. District No.: 3161. Registered No.: 171. Issued: 31 May 1943. Registrar of Vital Statistics: Dorwin D. Bowerson. Village of Wilson, New York). -- Eva (Hosmer) Roberts wrote in her family Bible that she was born, "On the lake Rd. Aug. 23, 1887" in the city of, "Wilson, Niagara Co.". (Family Bible. Original Owner: Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts ....).

[33]Ibid. -- For his supply of maple syrup, George probably relied on the maple trees on his father's farm. (Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, July 5, 1973).

[35]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, July 5, 1973. -- Regarding the family's movements, Eva wrote:

> When I was a girl my folks was [sic] always moving from Tonawanda to the Ridge. Mother liked the city [;] Father liked the farm ....

(Letter, Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur to Ronald Roberts, March 22, 1972). -- The Hosmers spent the winters in either Tonawanda or Lockport. The local newspaper, The Wilson Star, faithfully reported the family's comings and goings:

> George Hosmer, who has been working for the Gould Brothers of Lockport (florists) has moved back to the North Ridge.
> -- The Wilson Star (Wilson, N. Y.), Dec. 13, 1900.

(The Wilson Star [Wilson, N. Y.], Dec. 13, 1900 and Mar. 7, 1901 as copied by Mrs. Mildred Middleton [Letter, Mildred Middleton to Ronald Roberts, Aug. 20, 1973]). -- While in Tonawanda [or, North Tonawanda], Eva went to Groundy Street School. (Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, May 7, 1974).

[39]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, May 7, 1974. Eva recalled the following:

> We [George, Florence, and Eva] lived on Manhattan St. in Tonawanda. Uncle Will and Lizzy lived there [;] Uncle Glen lived there [;] Aunt Hattie, Aunt Nettie. They all lived on Manhattan St.

(Ibid.).

[41]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 20, 1975. -- A "democrat" was a sturdy uncovered produce wagon. It consisted of a single bench (one or two seats) and a long flat bed with sides. (Ibid.). -- A 1908 Sears, Roebuck & Company catalogue offered a 2,000 pound capacity farm wagon for $41.45. It was 10 feet long, weighed 795 pounds, and came with a "double box" and spring seat. Gear brake was extra at $3.25. (1908 Sears, Roebuck & Co. Catalogue. Catalogue No. 117. Chicago. p. 110).

[42]Ibid. Years later, county road crews reduced the grade on Pekin Hill. (Ibid.).

[43]Ibid. -- When Mildred Hosmer, George's youngest daughter, was old enough, the family took their produce to Niagara Falls. Mildred wrote:

> ... I know my father & me & mother went to the Falls to sell our produce 3 times a week.

(Letter, Mildred (Hosmer) Maue to Ronald Roberts, April 21, 1972).

[60]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur. [Various dates]. From 6 to 14, Eva attended the one room schoolhouse on "The Ridge". This school housed grades I through 8. High school was available only in the larger cities and, as a result, was beyond the means of most farm families. Eva loved school so much that she returned after graduation [1901] to help the teacher with the younger children. (Ibid.). -- Eva wrote:

> I went to the little brick school house on the Ridge where my mother & her sisters .... went .... Their father Martin Barker went to school [there also] & his initials were carved in one desk ....

(Letter, Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur to Ronald Roberts, Sept. 30, 1974).

[61]Ibid. -- A 1908 Sears, Roebuck & Company catalogue illustrated a girl's "Red Head Bicycle" for $16.60. This model came with a Peerless Coaster Brake. (1908 Sears, Roebuck & Co. Catalogue. Catalogue No. 117. Chicago. p. 168).

[65]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 9, 1975. Same citation for footnotes: 86, 88.

[68]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 20, 1975. George Hosmer, like most of his neighbors on North Ridge, was a Democrat. The community election hall was located at the corner of Town Line and Mountain Road. Of course, only men could vote at that time. In the election of 1896, George Hosmer supported William Jennings Bryan. (Ibid.). -- Bryan was seen by many farmers as a "representative of the common man". His advocacy for the free coinage of silver and his opposition to the protective tariff, struck a responsive chord among many of America's farmers (including those from Niagara County). This support, however, was not enough, and the Republican candidate, William Mc Kinley, was elected President. (The American Heritage Book of the Presidents and Famous Americans. Created and Designed By the Editors of American Heritage. VIII. New York: Dell Publishing Co., Inc., 1967. p. 655). -- Eva remembered that historic political contest. On election day, the students at the North Ridge School voted. When it came to divide up, Eva went to the Republican side of the room. One of her friends shouted at her, "Eva, get over here this instant - you know very well that you're a Democrat!" (Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur. [Various dates]).

[69]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 20, 1975. Church socials at the Methodist Episcopal Church on North Ridge were also extremely popular during the spring and summer. In winter, church members organized a series of evening programs. These amateurish productions usually included a variety of plays, skits, and recitals. (Ibid.). Several oyster suppers were offered each winter. These well attended affairs were held in the basement of the Universalist Church [located between North Ridge and South Ridge]. For 25¢, the participant received an excellent oyster supper, followed by a country play. (Ibid.).

[70]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 9, 1975. George and Florence appreciated all types of dancing. From Saturday night dances in Buffalo to square dances in Wilson, the Hosmers enjoyed the gaiety and friendship that dancing provided. Even the more unusual forms interested them. George, for example, was a fairly accomplished "clog" dancer. (Ibid.).

[71]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur. [Various dates]. -- the cylinder gramophone revolutionized the world of music. For the first time in history, ordinary people could summons, at will, the music they wanted. It was almost magical! Eva recalled that she heard her first mechanically reproduced music at the home of Grace Woods (a Molineaux Corners resident). The song was entitled: "I Am Tying the Leaves So They Won't Fall". This sad and sentimental song dealt with the pain and sorrow associated with tuberculosis. Apparently, many who had this disease died in the autumn. The song told of a boy whose sister had tuberculosis. By tying the leaves to the tree, the boy hoped to save his sister's life. (Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 20, 1975).

[78]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur, Sept. 20, 1975. Bert Lafler and Doctor Town were the only two people in the area who had telephones. (Ibid.).

[81]Interview - Kenneth Hosmer Roberts. July 1990.

[82]Death Certificate - George Hosmer. Date of Death: 22 Aug. 1909. Place of Death: Cambria, Niagara County, New York State .... According to this document, the contributing cause of death was, "Chronic Alcoholism". The duration of this disease was given as 2 days. (Ibid.). This suggests that George Hosmer may have been intoxicated at the time he took that fatal drink. (The Author).

[90]Interview - Eva Frances (Hosmer) Roberts/Mc Arthur. May 10, 1974. Same citation for footnote: 92.

[91]Ibid. According to Eva, Martin Barker drove Florence and Mildred to Tonawanda to sell "Nel". It was a sad day for all concerned. Mr. Pickard, George's former employer, had frequently offered to buy "Nel" whenever George decided to sell. After his death, Mr. Pickard kept his pledge. In the weeks and months that followed, Florence and Mildred would often take the streetcar to visit "Nel". (Ibid.).

COUNTY OF NEW YORK, SS:

JAMES RAY HOSMER being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he was born at 46 Great Jones Street, in the City of New York, County and State of New York, on the 4th day of December, in the year Eighteen hundred and thirty-four; that he knows of no public record of his birth, except what may be obtained from the records of his appointment as Secretary of Legation and Consul-General of the United States, at Central America in March 1887, his Commission as Captain & A.Q.M. in the Spanish-American War May 12th 1898, and his application on file in the Bureau of Pensions at age seventy; that he was baptized, as he has been informed and believes, by the Reverend Doctor Gardiner Spring, who was pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, in the said City of New York, at his father's residence, No. 46 Great Jones Street, but that no registry of such baptism was then made.

This deponent further states, of his own personal knowledge, that there existed an entry of said date of this deponent's birth, in the Family Bible of this deponent's parents, and that the said Family Bible was destroyed in the great fire in the City of Chicago, during the Autumn of the year 1871.

This deponent further states that his father, mother brothers and sisters having died several years since, he is the sole surviving member of his immediate family and cannot, consequently, obtain from that source any statement as to the date of his said birth.

That this deponent finally and unequivocally swears that he is now past the seventy-fifth anniversary of the date of his birth.

James Ray Hosmer.

Sworn to before me this 8th day of January 1910.

OBITUARY.

OLIVER E. HOSMER.

Mr. Oliver Ellsworth Hosmer, an old and esteemed resident of Nyack-on-the-Hudson, died in that village yesterday morning. He was a prominent merchant in this City 50 years ago, and was a conspicuous member of the Whig Party in the Henry Clay period of politics. He was offered the Mayoralty of the City at one time during that period. He had been a Republican since the formation of the party. Mr. Hosmer was born at Middletown, Conn., on May 6, 1808, and was named after Chief-Justice Oliver Ellsworth, of the United States Supreme Court, who was the guardian of his father, Hon. Stephen T. Hosmer, late Chief-Justice of Connecticut. The deceased was a grandson of Hon. Titus Hosmer, one of the Judges of the Maritime Court of Appeals, a court which preceded the formation of the United States Supreme Court. The latter was also one of the signers of the Articles of Confederation in behalf of the State of Connecticut. Mr. Hosmer's grandfather on his mother's side was Major-Gen. Samuel H. Parsons, of the Revolutionary Army, who was subsequently the Judge of the North-western Territory and one of the original members of the Society of the Cincinnati. The Hosmer family in this country descended from Thomas Hosmer, of Kent County, England, who settled in Massachusetts in 1628, and who was one of the founders of the Hartford Colony in 1636. Mr. Hosmer leaves a widow and three adult children—Stephen T. and Col. James R. Hosmer, and Eliza, the wife of Frank F. Gibbs, of this City. The funeral will take place at Nyack on Saturday next at 11:30 A. M.

Colonel James Ray Hosmer.

Colonel James Ray Hosmer, retired lawyer and veteran of two wars, died in his eighty-ninth year on Tuesday at his home, 62 Montague Street, Brooklyn. Colonel Hosmer was born in this city, and was educated at Columbia University. During the Civil War he was a Lieutenant Colonel on General Sheridan's staff, and after the war he entered the diplomatic service and was connected with the American Embassy in London. Subsequently he was the American Consul General to Guatemala. In the Spanish-American War he was a Captain in the Quartermaster Corps, and saw service in Cuba. Colonel Hosmer was a member of Winchester Post, G. A. R., the Sons of the Revolution and the Society of Colonial Wars. He left a widow, Mrs. Isabella Findley Hosmer, and two daughters, Mrs. Robert W. Candler and Mrs. Albert W. Bayard.

Dear Mrs. Rogers:

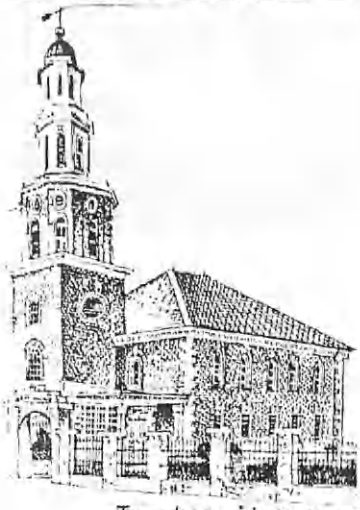

I received your letter today, and found the entry of your grandparents in my records. At that time, very little was recorded - just the names, church and the minister who performed the ceremony. The book is very fragile and I am unable to photocopy the entry. If it is needed for an official purpose I can send you a copy signed by the present Rector and bearing the seal of the church certifying that it is an exact copy of a marriage. This has been found to be sufficient. If you only need it for your own records here it is: Please note though, that the name is Owens.

Married on: September 25, 1871, Church of the Incarnation

Minister: The Reverend Henry E. Montgomery, D.D.

> Cecil Fairfax Hosmer was my mother. Her name was pronounced as the man's name, Cecil, is pronounced, and she often received junk mail addressed to Mr. Cecil F. Bayard. I never asked her, but it looks to me as if she was named after two counties: Cecil County of Maryland and Fairfax County of Virginia. Her mother's antecedants came from those two counties, I believe, although I'm not certain of the Fairfax connection, but know well of our ancestral background in Cecil Co.

[7]Family notes - Mary (Bates) Dade. According to Mrs. Dade, Elizabeth and Luke lived " ' in shouting distance ' " of Lela [Elizabeth's sister] and Albert Balcom. (Ibid.). -- Mr. Howard M. Tower [who lives at 3327 Creek Road, Youngstown] writes that his residence is, " ... 1500 ft. south of the Luke Tower house ....". Of the house itself, Mr. Howard Tower states that the " ... home [Luke Tower's home] still stands [1980] and is well preserved but remodeled. The outbuildings are gone". Among the interior furnishings of Luke Tower's home was a beautiful rosewood grand piano which stood in the front parlor. Luke's wife "Bessie" played it often and was well known in the community as a talented pianist. The instrument is still in existence and is owned by the former owners of Luke Tower's home who have since moved to North Scituate, Mass. It is here, in an old colonial home, that the piano now [1980] stands. (Letter, Howard M. Tower to Ronald Roberts, Aug. 30, 1980).

[8]Family Listing - Descendants of Albert Hosmer. -- According to one source, Luke and Elizabeth adopted Mary Butler who married Herbert Eaton. (Family notes - Mary (Bates) Dade. -- the preceding statement is partially refuted by Howard M. Tower. He writes:

> Herbert Eaton was my uncle by marriage to my father's [Ray C. Tower's] sister Victorine Mr. & Mrs. Luke Tower did raise a young lady from England whose first name was Mary and who eventually married Frank Hopkins [and not Herbert Eaton] of an old time farm family. I never knew her maiden name and am not sure she was formally adopted.

(Letter, Howard M. Tower to Ronald Roberts, Sept. 26, 1980). -- Luke Tower's brother was Peter Tower Jr., a custom officer in Youngstown, N. Y. (Family notes - Mary (Bates) Dade). -- Luke was the son of Peter and Olive (Baldwin) Tower. Peter Tower Sr. came to Porter, N. Y. on horseback from Cummington, Mass. He settled in Porter in 1815.  OBITUARY **
(1845 - 1929)

Introductory Remarks: The following obituary was sent by Mrs. Mary (Bates) Dade. In her letter, which accompanied the article, Mrs. Dade wrote:

> I'm enclosing a copy giving an account of his [Timothy Hosmer's] death, apparently copied from a newspaper, but there is no record of what paper, or of the date. Martha sent it among some other things that were probably in Mother's things .... Mother [Jennie (Balcom) Bates] also told me that Timothy ran away from home and lied about his age in order to get into the Civil War. She also said he was a "drummer boy" and never returned to New York after the war .... Apparently, according to the obituary, he never corrected the lie about his age.

(Letter, Mary (Bates) Dade to Ronald Roberts, Dec. 14, 1988)

HOSMER, AGED WAR VETERAN, DIES IN CAPE

Succumbs to Heart Attack at 86; Had Picturesque Career.

Timothy Hosmer, 86 years old, one of the few surviving Civil War veterans in Cape Girardeau, died suddenly early today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. O. Freese, 27 North Park avenue. He retired early Wednesday night and apparently was resting comfortably at midnight, but was dead when his daughter went to his room, adjoining her own, at 5 a. m. today. He had been indisposed for a week, suffering a complication of diseases which, because of his advanced age, greatly weakened him.

Hosmer has not been confined to bed, but had spent a portion of the past few days sitting up in a chair. Apparently he was feeling well when he retired, according to Mrs. Freese. He had been retired from active work for several years because of advanced age.

Known by Many

Many of the older residents of Cape Girardeau were well acquainted with Hosmer, who had lived through a picturesque career. During his lifetime he had been a soldier, Printer, newspaper editor, and sawmill operator.

Born March 8, 1843, at Buffalo, N. Y., Hosmer was reared there and at the age of 18 years enlisted in the Union Army. When he was present at the Memorial Day service here May 30, Hosmer stated that it was his belief that he was the only survivor of the 48th Infantry of New York. He was with General Sherman on his first expedition to North Carolina and later served in South Carolina, Florida and Virginia. During the past several Years he had received a pension from the government.

Published Papers

Hosmer came to Missouri nearly a half century ago and for a time operated sawmills at different places in the southern part of the state. He later became editor and owner of a weekly newspaper, "The Enterprise," at Bloomfield, which he edited for approximately 10 years. He then went to Illmo where he established "The Illmo Headlight," and another weekly newspaper. He owned this paper for about two years, and retired from active work at the end of that time. However, he regained some of his strength and for several more years helped edit a weekly paper, "The New Era" at Advance, which publication was owned and operated by C. C. O'Neal.

Since early manhood Hosmer had been a member of the Masonic order and at the time of his death held the office of Captain of the Host in the Royal Arch Chapter here. He also was a member of the council. Before coming to Cape Girardeau he was a member of the Blue Lodge at Advance. It was said that no man in the local chapter of the order was more ably advised in the ritual of the organization and degree work than Hosmer. He was a frequent visitor at Masonic Hall and spent much of his time there.

Member of Bible Class

Hosmer was a member of the Men's Bible Class of Centenary Methodist church and attended its sessions regularly up until a short time before his death. He walked unaided from the home of his daughter to the church each Sunday morning and was always an interested listener to the class discussions.

He had a vivid memory of the past and was always willing to tell the listener of his experences in the Civil War and in the early days of this district.

Hosmer is survived by an only daughter, Mrs. Freese, with whom he had made his home nearly 15 years, since the death of his wife. He also leaves a brother, Robert K. Hosmer, who resides in Michigan. His son-in-law, H. O. Freese, who is at Texarkana, Tex., and grandson, who is in Flint, Mich., are expected to arrive here late today, following which funeral arrangements will be made.

The body was removed to the Walther Funeral Home where it will remain until time for funeral services, which will be held Sunday afternoon at the funeral home. Rev. H. C. Hoy, pastor of Centenary Methodist church, will conduct the services. Interment will be in a cemetery at Tillman, near Advance.

[2]Letter, Emily Dale (Hosmer) de Montluzin to Ronald Roberts, July 2, 1986. The following brief sketch of Harry Hosmer was written by his daughter, Mrs. Emily Dale (Hosmer) de Montluzin in 1986. In her survey, Mrs. de Montluzin describes her father as a man who eagerly sought out adventure and who pursued opportunity at every turn. Blessed with indomitable determination and a fair amount of luck, Harry lived a life few but the hardy of spirit could have endured. His optimism and unbending faith in the future, set him apart from his peers.

> ... my father, Harry Hosmer ... was briefly a teacher in a one-room schoolhouse near Youngstown, N. Y. ... [later he became] a surveyor in the rapidly opening West, helping to survey Montana to build its first railroad through the state. He worked for several years in the office of the Anaconda Copper Mine in Butte, Montana, and then, when gold was discovered in Alaska, went with friends to California and booked passage to Alaska to prospect for gold. On the eve of their departure, however, he had an emergency appendectomy* .... His friends left without him, and when the ship reached Alaska near nightfall, all the passengers were put ashore to sleep on the open beach until daylight. During the night a tidal wave washed almost all of them to sea. My father [some years later] settled in Greenwood, Mississippi, where he established a thriving lumber & timber business. He married Emily Ann Gayden a teacher, in 1914 ....

* Incidentally, anesthetizing with gas was a new procedure, and he was one of the very first to be put to sleep with it for major surgery.

> On Oct. 18, 1862, Sylvester P. Hosmer enlisted in the 6th Ohio Cavalry. A few months after his enlistment, Sylvester was taken prisoner at Brandy Station, Virginia [probably on June 9, 1863]. The Confederates sent him to the notorious Libby Prison* where he remained confined until Aug. 2, 1863 when his captors paroled and released him. A year later, on Aug. 19, 1864, Sylvester enlisted on the gunboat Grampus. From the Grampus, Sylvester was transferred to the Great Western (Aug. 21, 1864) and the Milwaukee (Aug. 28, 1864). When the Milwaukee was torpedoed, Sylvester was again transferred, this time to the Elk where he served the remaining time of his enlistment. (Ibid.).

*Note: Libby Prison, located in Richmond, Virginia, was originall a four-story brick warehouse. Its six rooms (each measuring 45' X 100') housed hundreds of Union soldiers. Poor sanitation and overcrowding caused great loss of life ("Libby Prison". Funk & Wagnalls Standard Reference Encyclopedia. XV. 1959. p. 5595).

(Euphues [Arber], p. 466*)*

POEM - WILLIAM HOWE CUYLER HOSMER
(1814 - 1877)

Background Remarks from: The Weekly Sun ["1857-58 era"]:

' The Seneca's Return! '

* * * On our first page the reader will find a touching poem from the pen of our esteemed correspondent, W. H. C. Hosmer, Esq., whose tastes and studies have alike rendered the subject the favorite of his heart and mind. In a late number of the Cincinnati Daily Times, the following handsome compliment, we observe, paid by Professor Rainey to Mr. Hosmer on the occasion of the delivery of his Lecture on 'Indian Traditions,' in that city, a few weeks since. Professor R. was Chairman of the meeting, and in his remarks introductory to the Lecturer, said: — 'Mr. Hosmer has, as a poet, drank deep of the fountain of Indian Traditionary lore. His mother uttered her first infant syllables in the sonorous but poetic tongue of the Senecas. He has wandered with the Red Men in his own beloved Valley of the Genesee; bathed his imagination in their beautiful and enchanted Lakes — and sung again and again the mournful dirges of their long-lost braves and dusky maidens. Mr. H., unlike most of the poets of modern days, instead of copying over a thousand times the old, familiar scenes of Europe, has breathed the fresh air of his own mountain heights, and sipped at the sparkling wells of American inspiration — immortalizing thus the familiar scenes of his native land.'

The Seneca's Return.

BY W. H. C. HOSMER.

Thy waves, dark rolling Genesee!
  Still lave the flowery shore;
To look upon thy rippling tide
  I have returned once more;
Thy glassy bosom pictures yet
  The sunbeam and the cloud,
Though aged oaks that fringed thy bank,
  The ringing axe hath bowed.

The sun smiles on the meadow green
  Once shadowed by the wood,
And domes of beauty crown the hill
  Where our rude cabins stood:
Where rang the hunter's call of yore,
  And blazed the Council Fire,
The ploughman's whistle shrill is heard,
  And skyward points the spire.

The moss of age has over-crept
  Our hallowed Altar-stone,
And [rest of line illegible]
  Are gone — forever gone.
[ ] sky pilot guides no more
  [ ] dancing bark canoe,
And bows of strength are snapped in twain,
  From which our arrows flew.

I visited the burial-place
  Where my dead sires reposed:
But ah! the secrets of the Past
  The plough-share had disclosed;
And when I saw their naked bones
  Lie bleaching on the plain,
The long-sealed fountain of my grief
  Gushed forth like Summer rain.

Our dark-eyed maids will nevermore,
  In pensive twilight hours,
To strew upon their grassy mounds,
  Bring emblematic flowers;
Their knives and hatchets long ago
  Were eaten by the rust,
And strangers tread with careless feet
  On their dishonored dust.

The Pale-face long since offered us
  The cup with poisoned brim;
Our hearts grew weak with craven throbs —
  Our falcon eyes grew dim.
The birthright of our fathers brave
  We sold in our despair,
And vanished is their old renown
  Like smoke in empty air.

The water-fall that faintly sends
  Its murmur to mine ear,
In solemn language telleth me
  The angry dead are near;
And when the winds lift mournfully
  The sere, autumnal leaves,
Methinks for his degraded son
  My father's spirit grieves.

To seek the radiant Land of Souls,
  It is a fitting hour —
Farewell! old chase-ground of my Tribe —
  Lost home, and ruined bower!
One parting glance — a sullen plunge —
  The Chief was seen no more,
And the dark river glided on
  As calmly as before.

Biography

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

COLONEL WILLIAM J. HOSMER

Colonel William J. Hosmer, a veteran fighter pilot, is the Commander of the 355th Tactical Fighter Wing (TAC), Davis-Monthan AFB, Arizona. The wing has four A-7 squadrons, the 11th Tactical Drone Squadron, and five maintenance squadrons.

Colonel Hosmer was born October 17, 1930, in Rolette, North Dakota, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hosmer of Dunseith, North Dakota. He attended St. Louis Park High School in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and was graduated in 1948. After a year in the Army as an enlisted man, he was admitted to the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York. Graduating on 2 June 1953, with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Engineering, he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

Following flight training, Colonel Hosmer was assigned as an F-86 Sabre pilot at Foster Field, Texas in 1955, with the 723rd Fighter-Bomber Squadron. In 1956, he was assigned to the 311th Fighter-Bomber Squadron in Korea, again flying the F-86.

In 1957, he became an F-100 Super Sabre instructor pilot with the 4520th Combat Crew Training Wing at Nellis AFB, Nevada. In 1960, he was an F-100 instructor with the USAF Fighter Weapons School there. From January 1961 to July 1963, he flew left wing with the U. S. Air Force "Thunderbirds".

In August 1963, he served with the 18th Tactical Fighter Wing on Okinawa as an F-105 Thunderchief pilot and flight commander. During this time he flew missions in Southeast Asia while on temporary duty assignment from Okinawa.

Colonel Hosmer entered the Armed Forces Staff College in January 1966, and upon completion of that school became the Chief, Fighter Branch in the Tactical Air Command Directorate of Requirements at Langley AFB, Virginia.

He returned to Southeast Asia in May 1969 where he commanded the 308th Tactical Fighter Squadron at Tuy Hoa AB, Vietnam, flying F-100s. Upon completion of his tour in April 1970, he became the Assistant Director of Operations, and later Deputy Commander of Operations of the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing at RAF Lakenheath,

O V E R

England, which was equipped with the F-100 aircraft. He returned to the States in May 1972, and graduated from the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Alabama in May 1973.

He served as Vice Commander of the 355th Wing prior to assuming command on 19 July 1974.

A command pilot with 230 combat missions to his credit, Colonel Hosmer holds the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star Medal, and the Air Medal with 13 Oak Leaf Clusters. He is a member of the Daedalians, the Air Force Association, and the Red River Valley Fighter Pilots Association.

He is married to the former Patricia Small of Missoula, Montana, and has five children: a daughter, Barbara, 19; and four sons: John, 16; Steven, 14; Tom, 12; and Donald, 11.

1. Christmas Letter (Clark & Lyn Hosmer), Dec. 1988;
2. Photograph: Clark & Lyn Hosmer - taken about 1936;
3. Photograph: Clark & Lyn Hosmer - taken on "Reunion Cruise".

Clark Hosmer's investigative and probing mind has served him well through the years. As an academic, a military officer, and an author, his interests have been far ranging and universal. From practical problems in aviation to philosophical questions on humanism, Clark's views have consistently been marked by reason and logic. One may, occasionally, in good conscience, disagree with his conclusions, but one can never doubt his sincerity or depth of conviction. Whether defending the rights of man in America or deploring the injustices of the world at large, Clark has always written in unequivocal terms. What more can be said of an honest man?

The following excerpt comes from Clark and Lyn's 1988 Christmas letter. It illustrates, in rather concise fashion, Clark's many diverse interests. If one theme emerges, it must be involvement, a commitment to improve current conditions.

> Clark went to CA for a Weather Service reunion while Aileen flew here to stay with Lyn. He took an hour hot air balloon trip and visited a friend's world class winery. For the AF [Air Force] Academy, Clark evaluated three sets of internal AFA reports on the honor system. The supt [superintendent] at West Point acted on Clark's letter on avoidance of honor scandals. His paper on prevention of nuclear war is in press ["Could a Rechartered United Nations Help Prevent Nuclear War". International Journal on World Peace. Jan. - Mar. 1989. pp. 31-40]. He received favorable comments on his definition of 'humanism' in Free Mind and his paper on moral codes at the AME meetings in Pittsburgh .... Our local paper published Clark's letter on Amnesty International and another defending ACLU [American Civil Liberties Union] when Dukakis did not.

REST IN PEACE

You are not forgotten loved one
Nor will you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore
As time goes by, we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face
No one can fill your vacant place.

[1]Letter, Annabelle (Kent) Reynolds to Ronald Roberts, Feb. 27, 1974. Mrs. Reynolds relied on Mildred (Lochard) Morey for this information. -- Mrs. Wilma (Hosmer) Hagelshaw gave the year of birth as, 1871. (Letter, Wilma (Hosmer) Hagelshaw to Ronald Roberts, Apr. 18, 1974). -- The 1880 Census for Wilson, Niagara County, N. Y. showed that, "Jenney" aged "10", lived with her grandparents, Stephen and Angeline (Ash) Hosmer. This same census showed that, "Hattie", aged "12", lived with her grandparents, Stephen and Angeline (Ash) Hosmer. (1880 U. S. Federal Census. Wilson, Niagara County, New York State. Enumerated: 18 June 1880. Page: 23 [Printed Page: 419]. Dwelling No.: 208; Family No.: 208. Lines: 7-13 (Listing Stephen Hosmer and family). -- Apparently, "Jenney" and "Hattie" were sisters, as they both lived with their grandparents. (Assumption - The Author). For a transcription of this census entry, see appendix.

[3]Letter, Annabelle (Kent) Reynolds to Ronald Roberts, Feb. 27, 1974. Mrs. Reynolds relied on Mildred (Lochard) Morey for this information.

Note: There is some confusion as to the identity of Jennie May (Hosmer) Lochard's parents. From the 1880 U. S. Federal Census, it is clear that she was the granddaughter of Stephen and Angeline (Ash) Hosmer. Whether she lived permanently with her grandparents or was only on a brief visit with them [at the time of the 1880 Census] is difficult to determine.

THE "BARKER" SURNAME

- Origins -

The surname is, unquestionably, of Indo-European origin. Almost from the beginning, it has been associated with trees or bark.[1] One of the earliest examples of this association can be seen in the Sanskrit word, bhūrǰa, meaning birch-bark. From the Indian Subcontinent, the word, in all its various transitional forms, made its way into Europe.[2] In Old Norse, the language of early Scandinavia, the word acquired the form, börkr, meaning bark.[3] In Middle Dutch and German, the equivalent forms were identical: borke.[4] From these European examples, we see, quite clearly, the roots of our modern English word, bark. The consonant arrangement has remained remarkably stable over the centuries.

As the word slowly began to acquire the attributes of a true name, there emerged two distinct and separate areas of development -- the first in Northern Europe and the second in France.[5]

A.) Old Norse and Middle English forms of the name referred to "a tanner"[6] - a man who stripped bark from trees, boiled the bark, and prepared the final solution for tanning leather.[7]

B.) Old French variants of the name referred to "a sheperd".[8]

*It is interesting to note that modern French and modern English reflect these respective historic derivations:[9]

berger [modern French] = shepherd [modern English][10]

bark[11], barke [Middle English][12] = "to tan", a tanner [modern English][13]

- Movement -

There is a considerable body of circumstantial evidence to suggest that the word first came to England from Northern Europe. Exactly when this event occured is difficult to determine.[14] The appearance of the Anglo-Saxon word, barc (meaning, bark or rind)[15] tends to support the theory that the word entered England at a fairly early date. Possibly, the invasions of the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes during the 5th century provided the vehicle for the word's penetration into the island.[16] In any event, the word was well established by the beginning of the Middle English period.[17]

The French variant of the name came to England at a much later date.[18] The Norman Invasion of 1066 A. D. not only brought an end to the native dynasty in England, it also brought a huge infusion of Norman-French words into the English lexicon.[19] The French version of the name probably came to England at this time.[20]

English Variant:

The transition from the Anglo-Saxon, barc to the Middle English, barke was smooth and relatively uncomplicated. The basic sound, as well as, the single syllabic form passed virtually unchanged. The only visible alteration was in spelling, and this followed a rather predicable course.[36] The trailing "-c" consonant in the Anglo-Saxon form evolved into the more familiar "-k" in the Middle English equivalent. The addition of the terminal "-e" completed the transformation.[37] The last remaining change occurred when the word began to be applied as a name. At this point, the agent suffix was added: Bark + er, Bark + ere.[38]

French Variant:

In France, prior to the Conquest, the word for "shepherd" variously appeared as: berchier, bercher, berkier, and berker. It was in these forms that the name crossed the English Channel. Once in England, the orthographic change from "Ber-" to "Bar-" came about slowly. It was not until the 13th century that the transition was complete. As a result, the modified Old French form, Barker [= "shepherd"] became indistinguishable from its Middle English counterpart, Barker [= "tanner"].[39]

[16]The Author. -- In the 5th century, the Angles, Saxons, and Jutes spoke closely related languages. When these fierce Germanic tribes crossed the North Sea, they not only brought their foreign ways to a largely defenseless island, they also brought their strange sounding languages to a terrorized native population. It is not an overstatement to say that these invaders brought their foreign tongues to Britain at the point of a sword. Eventually, these Germanic languages would form the basis of a new language - English. (Robert Mc Crum, William Cran, Robert Mac Neil. The Story of English. New York: Viking Penguin Inc., 1986. pp. 58-60).

[19]Webster's New World Dictionary of the American Language. 1962. p. xxix. -- The massive absorption of so many French words, in a relatively short period, had a profound effect on the still growing English language. To illustrate how truly monumental these changes were, the authors of The Story of English wrote:

> ... if that linguistic cataclysm, the Norman Conquest of 1066, had not occurred, the English today might speak a language not unlike modern Dutch.

† Joseph Barker's father was Martin Barker. This fact is confirmed by Joseph's marriage certificate. It is interesting to note that Joseph's eldest son was also named Martin -- Martin James George Barker. Obviously, Joseph chose to name his first-born son after his own father. In view of this information, it is clear that Joseph Barker's death certificate was in error when it stated that his parents were John and Mary Barker. Judging from the common Christian names supplied in that document, it is more likely that they were "fillers" - that is, names used when the real names were unknown. The use of "John Doe" and "Jane Doe" are current examples of this longstanding bureaucratic practice.

(Entry of Marriage - Joseph Barker and Rachel Brett. Date of Marriage: 26 Dec. 1845 ....; Death Certificate - Joseph Barker. Date of Death: 9 Sept. 1903 ....)

■ Thomas Brett's tombstone gave his age at death as: "75 yrs. & 2 ms". From this information, we can determine that Thomas was born on or about Jan. 1800 [11 Mar. 1875 - 75 years, 2 months = Jan. 1800].

(Photograph - Thomas Brett's tombstone. North Ridge Cemetery, Cambria, N. Y. Taken: Sept. 1987. Photographer: Ronald Roberts)

‡ According to Joseph Barker's death certificate [1903], he had been a resident of Cambria for, "55 years". If Joseph settled in Cambria shortly after his arrival, then his entrance into the United States can be set at 1848 [1903 - 55 = 1848]. -- Joseph's second son, William, was born in Niagara County, N. Y. on 23 Apr. 1848.

TRANSCRIPTION OF
WILLIAM E. BARKER'S OBITUARY
- The Detroit Journal -
- Nov. 29, 1906 -

WM. E. BARKER PASSES AWAY

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN AND MASON SICK BUT THREE WEEKS.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE ENDS LIFE OF BUSINESS AND SOCIAL ACTIVITY.

William E. Barker succumbed at 9:45 o'clock Thursday morning to the attack of Bright's disease that seized him less than three weeks ago. Death came unexpectedly. Mr. Barker apparently being in somewhat better general condition during the past two or three days.

Mr. Barker became identified with the Detroit furniture trade in 1869, when he was 21 years old, and was probably the senior furniture dealer in length of years in the city. He began as a mattress manufacturer, became a member of the firm of Mills & Barker and later operated W. E. Barker & Co. In addition to his leased store at 176 Woodward avenue, Mr. Barker recently opened a store built by himself at 216 Michigan avenue, near Third and had figured on building another store on lots owned by him in Randolph street near the Harmonie hall. It was his opinion that the down town business expansion would soon make these west and east side locations profitable enough to let go of the Woodward avenue store.

Mr. Barker's Life.

Mr. Barker was born near Lockport, N. Y., April 24, 1848. He is survived by the widow and two brothers. One brother is H. B. Barker, also in the furniture business at Michigan and Cass avenues. The other brother, Martin Barker, resides in New York state. Mr. & Mrs. Barker suffered the loss nearly a score of years ago of their two children, a boy and girl, who came home from school one day with symptoms of diphtheria and died a few days later.

Mr. and Mrs. Barker attended the Universalist church on the board of trustees of which Mr. Barker served several years and until his death, part of the time as president.

Active in Masonry.

Mr. Barker took a very active interest in the Detroit Masonic temple almost from the inception of the enterprise, and was president of the Masonic Temple association when he passed away. He was elected a Scotish [sic] Rite representative to the Temple association in 1894, and gave continuing valuable service from that time. He was chairman of the big Masonic fair in 1895, a member of the committee that furnishes the Temple, and chairman of the Temple association finance committee and first vice-president of the association before election to the presidency.

He was a member of Detroit lodge, No. 2, F. & A. M.; Peninsular chapter, No. 16, R. A. & M.; Monroe council, No. 1 [3?] R. & S. M.; Detroit Commandery, No. 1, K. T.; Michigan Sovereign Consistory and other Scottish Rite bodies, and Moslem Temple, Mystic Shrine. He was also president of the Consistory board of trustees. At the October Consistory reunion he was present daily, apparently in the best of health, and enjoying to the utmost the reunion and work and renewing of acquaintances with old associates.

While no arrangements for the funeral have even been considered it is expected that it will be of Masonic character.

THE "ROBERTS" SURNAME

- Origin -

The "Roberts" surname is a true patronymic, that is to say, a name derived from the given name of a father or grandfather.[1] In this class of surnames, the lineal relationship is indicated by the addition of a prefix or suffix to the name. Before the advent of surnames, it was common to refer to someone as, "the son of ..."[2]; "the grandson of ..."[3]; or, "the descendant of ..."[4]. In the case of this specific surname, the meaning was clear and straightforward: Roberts -- "the son of Robert".[5] According to one source, Robert was, "a Teutonic personal name of great antiquity ...."[6]. From its Germanic roots, the evolution of the name was, if not totally predictable, at least fairly uncomplicated. Its transformation followed normal patterns. Its basic root was, at all stages, clearly discernible.

- Meaning & Derivation -

The following list illustrates the name's evolution. The sequence is, for the most part, chronological.[7]

1. Hrodebert - Old German[8]
2. Hrodebert, Hruodperht, Ruprecht - a combination of two Germanic stems: hruod-, ruod- = "fame" + beraht, perht = "bright, gleaming", Old High German[9]
3. Hrodperht, Ruopert - "fame-bright" (bright in fame), Old High German[10]
4. Rod(b)ert - "fame-bright", Old German
5. Rodbert, Robert - Old French[11]
6. Roberts - Rod = "counsel" + bert (or) beracht = "bright or famous" -- thus, "famous in counsel", Saxon[12]
7. Roberts, Robert, Robart - "the son of Robert (fame, bright)", Welsh, English.[13]

- Movement -

From Germany, the name travelled to France where its spelling was modified.[14]

The Normans, during the rule of Edward the Confessor [1042 - 1066], introduced the name into Anglo-Saxon England. The name acquired great popularity among the local populace.[15] The Norman Conquest of 1066 further entrenched the name in England.[16]

The transformation from forename to surname occurred probably before the close of the 13th century.[17] From England, the name spread into Wales, where it first appeared as a personal name.[18] Since the Welsh were slow to adopt the use of surnames, the modern form of the name did not gain popular acceptance until the middle part of the last century.[19] Despite this slow start, its growth as a surname was nothing short of phenomenal -- ranking among Wales' top surnames by the second half of the 19th century.[20]

The introduction of the "Roberts" surname into America came as the result of both English and Welsh emigration.[21] Colonial records indicate people bearing this surname settled Massachusetts and New England as early as the 1620's and 1630's.[22] Further waves of emigrants in the 18th and 19th centuries spread the name throughout the United States.[23]

- Evolution -

The Old German Hrodebert/Hrodperht and its concurrent and later variants underwent spelling modifications in both Germany and France.[24] The initial letter "H" was dropped fairly early in its development in either Germany or France, and the middle "d" was most likely eliminated at some later date in France.[25] By the time the name entered England, it was similar, if not identical, to the modern form -- Robert. The English added many variants, most of which were minor spelling alterations or suffix additions.[26] The modern form -- Roberts -- was the contribution of the Welsh, the final "-s" standing for, "son of".[27]

GENEALOGY OF THE HOSMER FAMILY

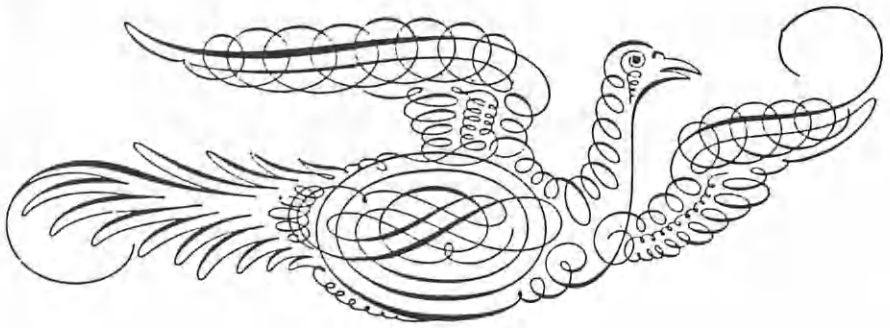

In 1861, James B. Hosmer* published the first systematic study of the Hosmer family in America. His 16 page pamphlet dealt primarily with the descendants of Thomas Hosmer (1603-1687) and relied, in equal measure, on documentary and family material. Its importance to the family can not be underestimated. All subsequent Hosmer genealogies have relied on this classic work for much of their 17th and 18th century material.

Copies of Mr. Hosmer's original work are rarely seen outside the nation's largest libraries and archives. A small original printing, combined with the passage of almost 130 years, have made this study a true rarity. The facsimile reprint, which follows, was produced from photocopies obtained from:

1.) The Connecticut State Library (Hartford, Connecticut); and,
2.) The Michigan State Library (Lansing, Michigan).

Only the best examples from each were used. The original pamphlet measured 5 1/2" X 9 1/8". For purposes of display, borders have been added

THOMAS HOSMER, son of Stephen and Dorothy Hosmer of Hawhhurst, County of Kent, England, settled in Newtown, now Cambridge, Mass., as early as 1632, and was admitted freeman in 1635. He removed to Hartford, Conn., in June, 1636. He was one of the original settlers of Hartford, and in the first record of Town proprietors of land, January 14th, 1639, there is set to him 60 acres.

His first wife, Frances, died February 15th, 1675, aged 73 years. He married for his second wife Mrs. Katherine Wilton, (now spelt Wilson) widow of Lieut. Extract from the Centennial Address, delibered at Middletown,

BY DAVID D. FIELD, D. D., Nov. 13th, 1850.

Titus Hosmer, Esq. While in Yale College, he was distinguished for the acquisition of sciences, excelled in the languages and in fine writing. Being graduated in 1757, settled in Middletown about 1760. By nature he had the genius of a poet. He encouraged Barlow to write the Vision of Columbus, as Barlow gratefully acknowledges in an elegy addressed to his widow.

Come to my soul, O shade of Hosmer, come
  Tho' doubting senates ask thy aid in vain;
Attend the drooping virtues round thy tomb,
  And hear awhile the orphan'd muse complain.

The man which thy indulgence bade aspire,
  And dare pursue thy distant steps to fame,
At thy command she first assumed the lyre,
  And hoped a future laurel from thy name.

How did thy smiles awake her infant song,
  How did thy virtues animate the lay,
Still shall thy fate the dying strain prolong,
  And bear her voice with thy lost form away.

In the subsequent part of the elegy, Barlow sympathizes with the large and greatly afflicted family, and extols the excellencies of his friend. The profession which Mr. Hosmer chose, led him to cultivate the powers of the understanding, rather than the imagination; and in this profession, faithfulness to his clients and strong powers of reasoning, soon raised him into esteem with the bar and the court; and secured him not only much professional business, but civil offices of honor and importance. Besides the common town offices and the commission of the peace which he held, he was elected a Representative to the General Assembly from October, 1773, constantly until May, 1778, when he was elected an Assistant, and thus annually until 1780, the year of his death.

In 1777 he was Speaker of the House of Representatives, and had great influence in prompting the Legislature to the adoption of vigorous measures against Great Britain. During a part of the war of the Revolution, he was a member of the Council of Safety, and in 1778, besides being an assistant in the State Legislature, he was a member of the Continental Congress. In January, 1780, when the plan was matured by Congress for establishing a Court of Appeals, principally for the revision of maritime and admiralty cases in the United States, he was elected one of the three judges; when the votes were cast, George Wythe of Virginia, William Paca of Maryland, and Titus Hosmer of Connecticut, were chosen. But on the duties of this appointment Mr. Hosmer was not permitted to enter, dying suddenly August 4th, 1780, aged 44. His person was above the common size, and his countenance expressive. His passions were naturally quick and strong, but kept under discipline. Fond of conversation, and extensively acquainted with men and books, he often entertained at his house a group of friends who courted his society. In deliberative bodies he was always heard with that attention and pleasure which are secured by lucid and manly argumentation, connected with probity and patriotism. He was in one word a gentleman of correct moral habits, a thorough scholar, a learned and eloquent lawyer, and a sound, practical statesman; deeply versed in national law and universal history. An obituary notice of him in the Connecticut Courant says, that he was endowed with a natural genius and capacity of uncommon magnitude, which, cultivated by the best and most liberal education, and continually improving, shone with remarkable lustre, and made him eminently useful in every department of life. Such abilities and improvements, joined with the most polished and engaging manners, formed him in a rare degree for influence and service among mankind. He is also styled in this notice, "the gentleman, the scholar, the friend, the patriot, the judge, the benefactor." The celebrated Dr. Noah Webster regarded him as one of the greatest men Connecticut ever produced. He numbered him among the three "mighties;" and these three he designated as Wm. Samuel Johnson, LL. D., of Stratford, Oliver Ellsworth of Windsor, Chief Justice of the United States, and the Hon Titus Hosmer of Middletown.
